David: how's tricks?
me: good, just reviewing stratfor situation
David: yeah, been following that through alternative media
David: don't have any insider info, but it sounds really promising. It's getting around, fast.
David: there's a thread about it in the discussion & debate thread on somethingawful, and I'll always insist that's a key place for any political issue to get exposure.
David: but it's crossing my facebook page multiple times as well.
David: (an' I like to think I got my finger on the pulse) me: important thing is to ensure that the actual revelations are brought up consistently in any debate about the value of the op
David: that's a great point
David: people who insist wikileaks is a bad thing will engage, and that's the opportunity to confront them with the bigger revelations
David: whether we change their position or not, we ensure they're aware of what their government is doing in their name
David: and moreover... the important thing is to persuade lurkers.
David: which is why I don't get derailed when arrogant posters shit all over me. They're only my third most important audience; I'm writing for lukers, and for posterity first.
